ONE COPY—ONE CENT.

GEORGE IS FIRST.
Most Presidents have furnished us
A fund of anecdote,
Log cabin tales
We have in tales
To wonder at and quote.
The mollycoddle and his ilk
A deal of copy made,
Such goodly themes
Yield many reams
And help the writer's trade.

But nothing ever helped us more Than George's cherry tree,
Its place is sure in literature,
As writers all agree.
Have you seen the line of spring woollens displayed by D. Hechinger & Co? Prices $25 and up. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Death of Jacob Metz
Mr. Jacob Metz died at his home in Dover last Saturday morning, February 17th, at the age of 82 years. The funeral was held from his late home Tuesday at 1 o'clock, burial at Dover.

LET UNCLE SAM GIVE YOU THE FACTS

Government reports show the steady output of coal during the last few years has made the dealers push for wider markets. We are going to get more trade—your trade—by giving you a greater value for your money.
You will never get out of debt unless you buy wisely.

Lexington; Mr. Harry Kerr of New York City; Miss Bessie Kerr, Mr. William Kerr and Mr. Samuel Kerr, all of Kansas City, Mo.

The funeral services will be held in Kansas City this afternoon and the burial will take place in the Lexington Cemetery.

FIRE SWEEP

Houston Texas, Suffers Six Mil- lion Loss

HOUSTON, TEX., February 21st.—From midnight until 9 o'clock today, a section of Houston a mile long, seven blocks wide and comprising twenty five blocks, was the prey of flames that, before they were gotten under control, threatened to swell into a conflagration.

The fire started in some cottages near the Southern railroad tracks. Impelled by a ferocious wind, the flames leaped from house to house and from factory to factory, in a populous district. Thousands were made homeless, and there were terrifying scenes as men, women and children, routed from their beds, fled hither and thither in vain efforts to save their belongings.

The loss on cotton compresses and stored cotton will be fully $2,000,000, and the total loss may go over $6,000,000. A number of factories were burned. The houses burned were for the most part those of workmen and not costly.

There are many Maysvillians in Houston.
Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Evans are now there spending the winter with their son Joe and daughter, Mrs. Bruce.

The mother and other relatives of Mr. C. E.
Dietrich of The Ledger Printery, also reside there.

None of the above were in the fire zone,

Catering to the Millinery

Out in Terre Haute the management has announced a decidedly new policy. They are going to make a special bid for the patronage of the fair sex, and in order to make the grounds attractive have announced that a special section of the stand will be reserved for the ladies. That is not all—Goodness no! They are going to have the chairs in this reserved section scrubbed every day in order that the fannies will not soil their clothes.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube.
When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound in your ears, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are cured by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

GEISEL & CONRAD.

The destruction of representative government, and the substitution of organized mob rule, is the fundamental basis of insurgency.

What Insurgency Really Is.

The theory of representative government is that men of wisdom and ability shall be selected by the people, to govern in deliberative assembly those who select them. There is no insurgent state in which the legislature is a deliberative body. Insurgent legislators are merely governmental waiters, put up as puppets so serve a legislative bill of fare written down by a few bosses and endorsed by the voters at the polls.

This endorsement by the people is relied upon by insurgency as evidence of a return of the sovereign authority to its ultimate source of power. In fact it is like hiring a carpenter to perform an operation for appendicitis. When the insurgent spellbinder tells an audience of admirers that they know more about what they want than any legislator, of course they agree with him. Then he proceeds to tell them what they want. In two hours he explains theories of government to them on which years of study have been spent by those who understand them. They never heard of these things before, and in two hours they couldn't master them understandingly if they were trained students—which most of them are not. But, when they leave the hall, they believe what the spell-binder has told them. These are not their ideas—this is not what they want—their conclusion is not their judgment—it is merely the adoption of the ideas of their political boss. The will of the people, as expressed through the modern methods of insurgency, is just about as near intelligent judgment, as the talk of a parrot comes to being conversation. But, having opened their mouths like the birds in the nest, and taken whatever is stuffed down their throats, they immediately become obsessed with strange and unfamiliar knowledge, and proceed to send a man to the legislature with his right to think for himself contracted away, and with no power delegated to him but to say yes or no on a roll call. When a bill is introduced in an insurgent legislature a check of the election returns discloses how each legislator will vote. He has no discretion, and though investigation may convince him that his constituents were led to a wrong conclusion, and though his judgment may lead to an honest belief that the legislation to which he is committed is in fact harmful, he has no escape from the fetters into which insurgency has put his intellect, and the shackles it has put upon his judgment. An insurgent legislator is as completely an automaton as is a nickel-in-the-slot chewing gum machine.

Now it has developed in the course of time that even insurgent legislators are becoming tired of that sort of thing, and here and there they are beginning to think for themselves, and sometimes they even go so far as to act for themselves.

This naturally disturbs the bosses, and having found the people easy to enthrall with hypnotic oratory, they have concluded to eliminate the legislature, by the general application of the initiative, referendum and recall.

The transaction of the affairs of the government by the people direct, is not representative government. This nation was founded on the principle of government by representation, and by responsible, intelligent and independent representatives. The deliberative assembly for legislation is a fundamental and indispensable function of that form of government. The people should not be misled by the fallacy that direct legislation is representative government. If they want to turn the legislative function of government over to those who know nothing about it, and those who in the nature of things can know nothing about it, and destroy a system under which it is at least possible to secure intelligent consideration of legislation, they should do it knowing what they are doing. Insurgency breeds the most infamous system of bossism that has ever infested politics. There was never as near an approach to imperial dictatorship in a South American republic as this nation had under its only insurgent President. LaFOLLETTE had in Wisconsin a machine that by comparison with the days that preceded him was as a Silent Knight engine to an old-fashioned wind-mill.

Don't be swept off your feet by the smiling assurance that you know as much about what this government needs as anybody. You don't, and in your own heat you know you don't. If you want anything else done, you hire someone who has taken the time to learn how. Why shouldn't you hire somebody to run your government who either knows something about it, or will take the time to learn. Remember that the man who cries, Stop Thief! is sometimes the man who ought to be stopped. In other words—don't let BOB LA FOLLETTE, THEODORE ROOSEVELT, or anybody else, do your thinking for you, or jolly you into the idea that you can do things you know you can't better than somebody can that you know knows how. You can't and you really know you can't.—The Search Light.

SCOUTING IN WEST VIRGINIA

Incidents of Battle of Beverly, Near Where General Garnett Was Killed, Are Recounted.

The story of a scout who passed among his unsuspecting enemies and returned later to capture some of them is told by Lysander Johnston, who was a soldier in Gen. George B. McClellan's army in western Virginia early in the war. The adventure of which he tells was an incident of the operations that include the battles of Beverly, Laurel hill, Rich mountain and Carrick's ford, fought from July 11 to 13, 1861. In the last named battle Gen. R. S. Garnett, the confederate commander, was killed where he was holding a second ford with a small bodyguard.

Mr. Johnston's story is as follows: "I was acting as a scout in Gen. Thomas A. Morris' division and the day of Gen. Garnett's death I was sent with a message to Gen. George B. McClellan at Beverly, Va. I was selected by Gen. Morris at Grafton to go out into the country and procure horses enough to mount thirty or forty men, whom I was to take out on scout duty between the enemies' camp at Laurel hill and Phillipi.

"Gens. McClellan and Morris were to begin the attacks on Pegram and Cutting Trees Across the Road.

Garnett at about the same time. So Morris moved from Phillipi July 9 and took position inside Garnett's outer line of works. The 10th and 11th he bombarded Garnett and drove him into his stronger works. Early in the morning of the 12th we found that Garnett had abandoned his mountain. Gen. Morris prepared a message as soon as he could to send to Gen. McClellan for orders. He asked me to deliver it to Gen. McClellan as soon as possible.

"I started for Beverly shortly after daylight in a drizzling rain, but protected by a rubber blanket with a hole in the center, through which I stuck my head. This outfit proved to be my protector from identification soon after. On reaching the road running up and down the valley, much to my surprise, I learned that a large body of troops had just passed the junction coming down the valley from Beverly. I halted a few seconds to take in the situation and then went ahead.

"I had not gone more than a mile or two when, rounding a curve in the road through the woods, I came face to face with Garnett's rear guard of about 200 or 300 men. The psychological moment had arrived. I did not dare stop to think and so kept up my gait until I came to the head of their column. Then I checked my speed a trifle and gave the military salute and they opened fire. I passed through their ranks and was then able to take in the situation. I was not out of danger, however, for they had left ten or twelve men a short distance back, scattered along cutting trees across the road to keep Gen. McClellan from pursuit with his artillery. I passed through and around the fallen trees with the air of an inspector of their work without being asked a question. As I went among the men the whole truth flashed through my mind: Gen. Garnett had cut off his retreat on that road until he arrived at or near Beverly and then he had had to countermand down the valley.

"Under Gen. McClellan's orders Gen. Morris immediately pursued Gen. Garnett. If Gen. Garnett had not made the mistake of trying to retreat up the valley and through Beverly he would have had at least ten or twelve hours the start of Gen. Morris and would have escaped. As it was he was only four or five hours ahead and we overhauled and captured his supply train before it had gone more than two miles from the point where I had met Gen. Morris on my return from Beverly. About five or six miles further on Gen. Garnett's Cheat river, near the afternoon."

Into Slavery, Granny Hafford Is Dead at the Age of 116 Years

"Aunt Granny Hafford," a negress, 116 years old, died at Bloomington, Ill., and was sold seven times into slavery.

It was from the record of slave owners that her age was obtained. She was the mother of 17 children, and through the dealings of slavery all traces of 10 of them were lost.

At the time of the Civil War she was on the plantation of George Hafford, near Monticello.

JUDGE FOR YOURSELF

WHICH IS BETTER—TRY AN EXPERIMENT OR PROFIT BY A MAYSVILLE CITIZEN'S EXPERIENCE

Something new is an experiment. But to be proved to be as represented. The statement of a manufacturer should not always be convincing proof of merit. But the endorsement of a friend is. Now suppose you had a bad back, A Lame, Weak or Aching one, Would you experiment on it? You will need of many so called cures. Endorsed by strangers from far-away places. It's different when the endorsement comes from home.

Easy to prove local testimony. Frederick Dressel, 1238 East Second street, Maysville, Ky., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a most excellent remedy for kidney trouble and am only too glad to speak in its behalf. About five years ago I was bothered by weak kidneys and the kidney secretions were scanty and attended with pain during passage. Sharp twinges across the small of my back were common and greatly interfered with my work. While telling a friend of my condition, he advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box at J. J. Wood & Son's Drug store. I used them according to directions and they afforded me prompt relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Stubborn Case

"I was under the treatment of two doctors," writes Mrs. R. L. Phillips, of Indian Valley, Va., "and they pronounced my case a very stubborn one, of womanly weakness. I was not able to sit up, when I commenced to take Cardui.

I used it about one week, before I saw much change. Now, the severe pain, that had been in my side for years, has gone, and I don't suffer at all. I am feeling better than in a long time, and cannot speak too highly of Cardui."

TAKE The CARDUI Woman's Tonic

If you are one of those ailing women who suffer from any of the troubles so common to women.

Cardui is a builder of womanly strength. Composed of purely vegetable ingredients, it acts quickly on the womanly system, building up womanly strength, toning up the womanly nerves, and regulating the womanly system. Cardui has been in successful use for more than 50 years. Thousands of ladies have written to tell of the benefit they derived from it. Try it for your troubles. Begin today.

Thrifty Players in Baseball Now

Statistics said to be reasonably accurate show that 34 old ball players died during 1911, and of this number, only two left families in comfortable financial circumstances.

Another text, of course, for a sermon on the happy-go-lucky ways of the old-time players and the freedom with which they entertain their friends while they were in the height of their fame. No, not that. Some truth in that too, but there is another side to this statement which is brightened by a silver lining and one full of hope for the present generation.

Players have learned to save their money. They receive better salaries, too, than in the old days, and with strict training methods, and in many instances good advice from club owners, the habit of saving has been instilled and the ball player can now retire with as much money as any salaried employe in the average business can save in a lifetime.

Fred Clark is worth a quarter of a million and he is still playing. Frank Chance and dozens of other players can be named who have plenty of this world's goods, and safely invested, too. When the present generation of ball players pass on and 34 of them, perchance die in one year, there will be a different story to tell about mouths of fatherless children unfed.

STANDING BY HIS SERGEANT

General Gibbons Makes Good Promise Given to Young Private Whom He Wished to Promote.

E. B. Armstrong was a private in company B of the Sixth Wisconsin. He was a tall, well built, vigorous young man, and when Capt. John Gibbon of battery B, Fourth United States artillery, called for volunteers from the Second, Sixth and Seventh Wisconsin, to fill up his company, Armstrong went from company B. His fine appearance and soldierly bearing soon attracted the attention of Captain Gibbon, writes Lieut. Col. J. A. Watrous in the Milwaukee Sentinel. A couple of months after he had joined the battery Captain Gibbon sent to Armstrong and informed him that he was going to make him a corporal.

"But," said Armstrong, "Captain Gibbon, I don't want to be a corporal—I don't want promotion."

"I did not call you here to ask whether you wanted to be a corporal—whether you wanted promotion or not; I called you here to inform you that I had decided to make you a non-commissioned officer in this battery."

"You will excuse me, Captain Gibbon, but I repeat that I don't want to be a non-commissioned officer in this battery. You have men here who have been with five or ten years, and they would make it very unpleasant for me were I, a recruit, placed over them."

"Never mind that. I will tell you what you can always do. If you get into any trouble with the men or any one else, if you have the right on your side, and they demand to know why you do so and so, you can tell them that you do it by order of John Gibbon, and I will back you every time."

When Armstrong returned to his tent he was a corporal in battery B.

By July, 1862, Gibbon was a brigadier general and commander of the brigade in which battery B served. A portion of the brigade with a part of battery B was sent out from Fredricksburg, toward Orange courthouse, on a raid. On the way back the troops went into camp for the night, and Sergeant Armstrong, who had been promoted, took possession of a barn and had got fairly settled when some of the staff and General Gibbon's orderlies came and ordered him out, saying that they wanted the barn for their horses. Armstrong flatly refused to obey the order of the lieutenant who gave it. The lieutenant then hurried away and brought the adjutant general of the brigade. Still Armstrong refused to go. That woke up the adjutant general and he said:

"Sir, by what right do you refuse to obey my orders?"

"By the right, sir, given me by John Gibbon, who commands this brigade," was the prompt and firm reply of this farmer boy, who had become an important factor in the handling of one of the batteries made famous in the great war. The adjutant general returned to Gibbon for new authority, and told him what the sergeant had said.

"Armstrong, did you say?" asked General Gibbon.

"Yes, that young giant in your old battery."

"And he refused to turn his horses over to me?"

General Gibbon's Orderlies Came and Ordered Him Out.

and men out of that barn because I had given him the right to refuse?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why, that is the fellow that I had to force to become a corporal. He is right. I told him that I would stand by him in whatever he did in the interest of the battery, and I will."

Sergeant Armstrong, his men and his horses remained in the barn and the staff and orderlies had to seek other quarters.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.
Born Feb. 22, 1732. Died Dec. 14, 1799.
The character, the counsel and example of our Washington... they will guide us through the doubts and difficulties that beset us; they will guide our children and our children's children in the paths of prosperity and peace, while America shall hold her place in the family of nations.—Speech of Edward Everett, July 4, 1853.

you may read the tablets describing the affecting scene on his departure to his home in Mount Vernon.

But on April 30, 1789, little old New York went wild with joy when the idol of the nation returned to be its president, and the pomp and ceremony of that first inauguration took place in the old Federal hall, now marked by the Subtreasury building, in Wall street. Here you may see the very stone on which the president stood while taking the oath of office, and the Bible is owned by St. John's lodge, in the Masonic Temple.

The fine mahogany furniture of Sheraton design used at that time is shown in the Governor's room of the city hall, the high-backed inaugural chairs, and the desks and armchairs used by the cabinet and the senators. The flag that waved over all this rejoicing is carefully preserved in a glass case.

Two different houses were used by Washington during the year 1789 and 1790 as presidential mansions—the first, a beautiful colonial house belonging to Walter Franklin, a wealthy merchant, that stood at No. 1 Cherry street, now shadowed by the gloomy Brooklyn bridge pier; the second was at No. 39 Broadway.

Each day he drove in courtly style to the federal hall, in Wall street, and so thoroughly did he acquire the habit that he is everlastingly glued to the spot in the bronze statue on the subway steps.

On Sundays the president worshipped at St. Paul's chapel, in the commodious box pew, as large as a room in our modern apartments, being of sufficient area to admit of the comfortable stretching of his long, dignified legs, and far enough removed from the pulpit to encourage a few yawns or a sly nap unheeded by the rector.

As we celebrate the birthday of Washington, patriotic New Yorkers will point with a pride that is pardonable to the four buildings still in fine preservation, which were honored by his presence—the Jumel mansion, the Van Cortlandt Manor house, St. Paul's chapel and Fraunces' tavern.

Can proud Philadelphia or boastful Boston show more?

Historic and Beautiful Ground.
There is no more historic ground in the country than that around Valley Forge. The very mention of the revolution suggests Valley Forge, the scene of its greatest crisis. And the work of beautifying and improving it is continually progressing. But recently it was that congress was urged to pass a bill granting $100,000 for the erection of suitable memorial arches. Already a memorial chapel and a museum are under way, in addition to historic buildings that are maintained as nearly as possible in their original condition.

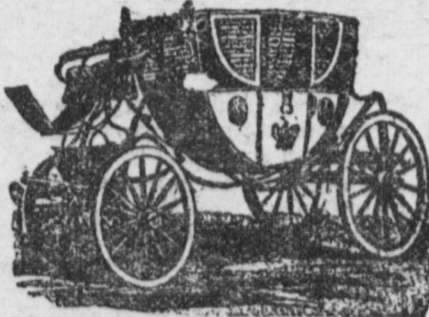

Washington's State Coach.

After the disastrous defeat of the Battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776, Washington was forced to abandon the city. During the Battle of Harlem Heights, September 16, and for five weeks afterward the Jumel mansion, in One Hundred and Sixtieth street, near Amsterdam avenue, then known as the Roger Morris house, sheltered him. For seven years, until 1783, the British lion swished his proud tail and roared through our New York streets, but on November 25 of that year General Washington returned to his own. The previous night the Van Cortlandt Manor house, in Van Cortlandt park, opened its hospitable doors to the victorious general, and you may see the room he occupied, the bed in which he slept.

He entered the city on Evacuation day at the head of his ragged but triumphant soldiers after Lord Howe and his troops had sullenly departed.

Quaint little Fraunces' tavern, at Broad and Pearl streets, then came in for its share of the glory, for that very night the patriots gave Washington a banquet, which ended with the toast, "May the remembrance of this day be a lesson to princes."

Again, on December 19, a farewell dinner was given by Washington to his officers in the "Long Room" and here

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the fogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. B. F. Dickover, of Ulick, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.
